18TH SEPTEMBER 2031

Yesterday, a tragic event occurred. Families were fleeing Norwich during the floods. During the mayhem an innocent girl Zoe was separated from her parents. Are her parents still alive? Or have they fallen victim to the treacherous

The appalling floods

After days of flooding (as a result of climate change) the formidable floods finally took control of Norwich. Boats came and went taking many of the citizens to the mainland. Unfortunately, the boats didn't have enough capacity to fit all the residents. This meant many families were separated. Zoe Rapclaw, 13, was left behind as there were only 2 seats left on the boat and those became her mum and dad's.

Bob Waterlout (a fisherman) reported that there has been no sign of her parents so far but he will keep a lookout. Young Zoe told us "I am very worried at the moment and I still have nightmares about it."

The story so far

After Zoe's parents evacuated Zoe began to find safety. She found an ancient, dilapidated shed and discovered a boat 'Lyca'. This helped her to row across the sea. After a while, she reached an island (supposedly Eels Island) and has searched for any information about her parent's whereabouts.

Zoe told us she has literally tried everything under the sun to find them. In addition to that Frank Buttermouth told us, "Mr and Mrs Rapclaw have not been found yet but we have fingers and toes crossed they will be."

What is happening now?

Until now, Zoe's parents have not been seen, found or heard from. Havoc has filled the air and Zoe is full of anxiety: she is traumatised by the fact that she might never see her parents again.

Posters and wanted signs have been displayed all over Norwich. The authorities have been doing all they can to find her parents; guards are searching day and night to try and reunite Zoe with her parents. Mr. Wellington said he has already signed up for both search parties (Wednesdays and Sundays).

Eels Island where Zoe is now.
