

COP26

What is COP26?

COP26 is a world leaders meeting where all the countries leaders meet up to talk about climate change. They do this so they can think of ways to help stop climate change.

It isn't just presidents or prime ministers who come. Sometimes people from the royal family come. Young activists and children fighting to stop climate change, also come. Every year it's held, it's hosted in a different country and the people from that country also choose the location.

What does COP26 stand
for?

Cop stands for 'Conference of The Parties' and 26 stands for the 26th time they've met.

Where was COP26
held this year?

This year, COP26 was held in Glasgow, Scotland.

COP26 was held in a part of Glasgow near the river. In the picture, you can see all the big buildings that were used for COP26.

The picture on the right shows what it looks like inside the COP26 buildings.

What is Net Zero?

Net Zero is the balance of Greenhouse Gases produced and removed in the atmosphere.

Why is Net Zero a big part of COP26?

It is a big part because in countries, they are trying to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. At COP26, it is a chance for world leaders to talk about how they are reducing greenhouse gas emissions in their country.

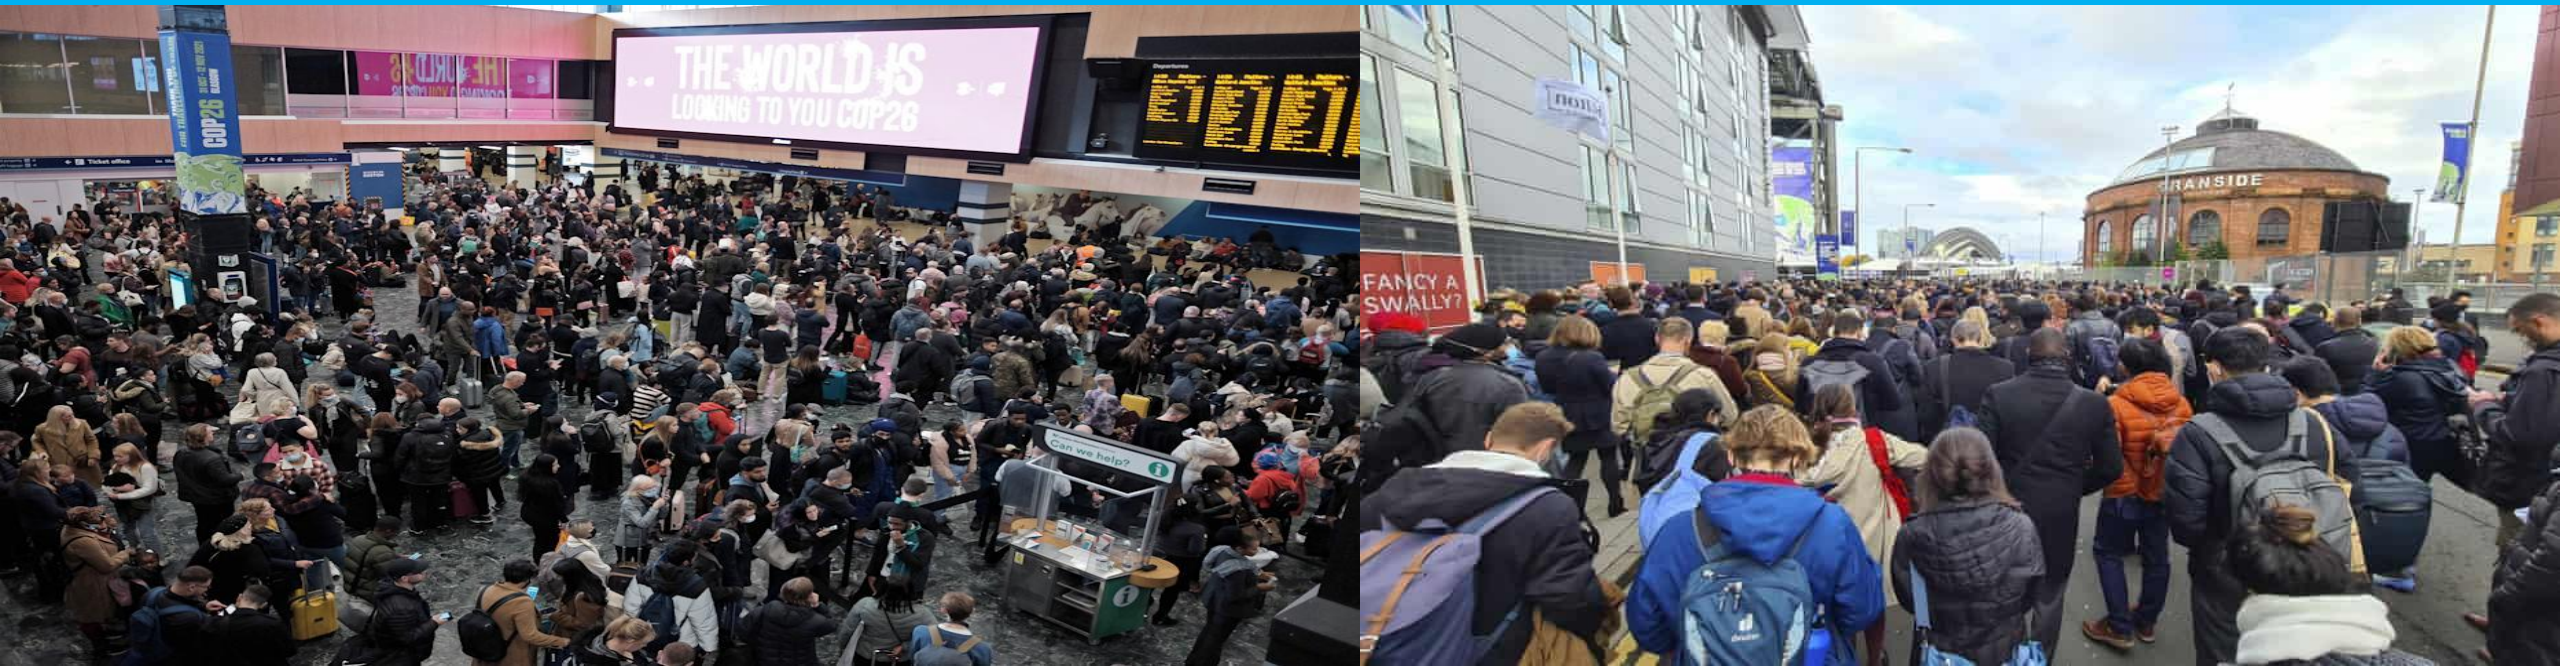

You may have heard of Net Zero. Net Zero is a big part of COP26. World Leaders try to achieve Net Zero in their country because it can really help. They are trying to achieve it by 2050.

Is Net Zero possible to reach?

Yes Net Zero is possible to reach but it requires some big changes to countries.

COP26 problems

There have been many problems of actually getting in to see the events at COP26. The public have been struggling a lot. There have been thousands of people queuing up just to get in and see all the events. So this doesn't cause chaos too much, the police monitored this.

What does a successful COP
look like?

They want
to increase the ambition
of people.

They want to reduce emissions like Net Zero
emissions.

They want to increase the amount of finance.

They want to reduce the temperature.

They want
to increase adaptation to their ideas.
